Mirella 71 years old. She spent 43 years of her life with the only person loved, 43 years of sharing difficulties, laughs and beautiful moments; a family, a house, values handed down. Since few years her days are cyclic, monotonous because of her husband's illness, anyway she tries to look forward with devotion, strength and love... as long as there is life there is hope... even if memories are slowly wasted day by day relentlessly.

Mirella is the love story of a woman for her husband, woman suddenly forced to face on her own the biggest difficulty experienced in her life, made by hopes and unbelief, pain and resignation, sorrow and powerlessness.

There are 35.6 million people living with dementia worldwide these days. With the numbers nearly doubling every 20 years, to 65.7 million in 2030 and 115.4 million in 2050. The countries more afflicted are: China, India and Latin America. 58% of all people with dementia worldwide live in low and middle income countries, rising to 71% by 2050.

Dementia mainly affects older people, although there is a growing awareness of cases that start before the age of 65. After age 65, the likelihood of developing dementia roughly doubles every five years.

People affected with dementia, their families and friends are affected on personal, emotional, financial and social levels. Lack of awareness is a global problem. A proper understanding of the social costs of dementia, and how these impact upon families, health and social care services and governments, may help to address this problem.

It is vital that governments and policy makers across the world recognize that the cost of dementia will continue to increase at an alarming rate and we must work to improve care and support services, treatment and research into dementia in all regions of the world.
